A Journal of English Language and Literature

Editors: T.A. Birrell and J.M. Blom, English and American Institute, University of Nijmegen, the Netherlands.

Audience: Scholars in the field of medieval studies, modern linguistics and English & American literature, librarians, teachers and students of English, in short all those who are interested in modern approaches to the study of English in all its facets.

Aims and Scope

The periodical English Studies was founded more than 70 years ago by the Dutch grammarian, R.W.V. Zandvoort. However, from the very first issue it was not only one of its aims and interests, English Studies is, and has been a unique publication in the field of "English" because of its range: it covers the language and literature of the English-speaking word from the Old English period to the present day. In spite of this range the foremost position of English Studies in many of these areas is undisputed: it attracts contributions from leading experts who recognize this periodical as one of the most valuable and indispensable of both their fellow-experts and those whose professional interest in "English" is more general.

The six or seven articles of each issue are supplemented by 10 to 15 substantial reviews of carefully selected publications, and annual surveys of the most important works in the fields of English and American poetry, drama and the novel, and of key literary criticism studies. Keep readers informed of recent developments, English Studies is a European periodical (and, we are proud to add by far the biggest bi-monthly of this nature outside England and America). It is edited from the Netherlands, while its advisory board of editors consists of scholars from a great number of European countries. Thus readers can come into contact with the specific European contribution to "English". At the same time English Studies has an editorial office in London, apart from its Nijmegen head-office, and both its contributors and its subscribers are scattered all over the globe.

„Studies in Romanticism has consistently balanced the best in traditional scholarship with the best in advanced criticism. It is one of the few distinguished magazines in a subject that is finally coming into its own.„

CALL FOR PAPERS
Fourth International Congress
Margarita Island
Venezuela
25-31 May 1991

Writers, scholars, critics, and translators from all languages are invited to submit papers treating any aspect of the beast fable and its sister genres. Submissions must be in English. The most distinguished papers delivered at the Congress will be published in Bestia IV. An advisory board of internationally renowned scholars and writers will make all final selections. Poets and fiction writers may submit original fables. Papers previously read at other conferences or previously published cannot be considered.

One-page proposals and abstracts for refereeing must be postmarked by January 4, 1991.

Special—substantially reduced—rates and room rates are available to Society members and Congress participants only.
