The Council of Editors of Learned Journals

The Council of Editors of Learned Journals, an Allied Organization of the Modern Language Association, is an organization of editors of scholarly journals in all disciplines. As the major national organization dedicated to supporting academic journal publishing, our membership of over 450 editors represents an invaluable collective wellhead of editorial wisdom and experience.

Making this fund of expertise available to new and veteran editors alike for discussing common editorial concerns and sharing considered advice is one of our major purposes. CELJ invites all academic journals to join. Regular membership is only $45 annually.

NEW LITERARY HISTORY
ANNOUNCES RALPH COHEN PRIZE

Named after New Literary History's founding editor, the Ralph Cohen Prize was established to acknowledge his longstanding commitment to encouraging and publishing the work of junior scholars. Graduate students, untenured faculty, and independent scholars are eligible to submit essays for the competition on any topic appropriate to the aims of New Literary History.

The winner of the award will receive a $2,000 honorarium. The essay will be published in a future issue of New Literary History. More information is available at http://newliteraryhistory.org

The deadline for submission is May 15, 2022.

Forthcoming issues include:
- Contexts
- In the Mood
- A New Europe

LECTION WOMEN'S WRITING

Contemporary Women's Writing critically assesses writing by women authors who have published approximately from 1970 to the present. The journal aims to reflect retrospectively on developments throughout the period, to survey the variety of contemporary work, and to anticipate the new and provocative in women's writing.

OXFORD JOURNALS is delighted to offer you free online access to Contemporary Women's Writing until 31 January 2012. To receive your free access, simply follow the instructions below:
